

• At the Colorado Springs Osteopathic Foundation's annual board and membership meetings, new officers and members were elected. Newly elected officers of the board of directors of the Colorado Springs Osteopathic Foundation include William Griffis, D.O., physical medicine and rehabilitation physician, president; Thomas Higginbotham, D.O., occupational medicine specialist, president-elect; Curry Horak, M.D., emergency medicine physician, secretary; Penny Sayre, C.P.A., Stockman, Kast, Ryan + Co., treasurer; and John Kurish, D.O., family practice physician and immediate past president. Other members of the board are William Dulaney (newly elected), Howard and Jensen law firm; Lynne Jones, Colorado Springs Health Partners; Thomas McCarthy, D.O., Front Range Orthopaedics; Daniel Tell, D.O., Rocky Mountain Cancer Center; Mary Wall, R.N., community volunteer; and Michael Welch, D.O., vice president of medical, Peak Vista Community Health Centers. Toni Green, D.O., breast surgeon and director of breast oncology for Penrose-St. Francis Health Services, and Sondra Holloway, a fourth-year medical student with Rocky Vista University College of Osteopathic Medicine, were elected members of the foundation.